AROUND TOWN WITH OLIVIA FORTSON

WILD THINGS

Alan Barnhardt, the new executive director of the Carolina Raptor Center, releases a rehabilitated barred owl back into the wild as amazed guests look on. This dramatic moment was the finale of the center's "Birds of a Feather" party at the Charlotte Nature Museum. More than 150 supporters of the center munched on elegant eatables by Something Classic catering while officially welcoming Barnhardt to the flock. A native Charlottean, he is an Eagle Scout who was the president of the former outdoor retail store Alanby and an active environmentalist.
