

dance of public and private bike racks and a wonderful B-Cycle bike share system, but alas, it still suffers from a huge deficit of safe, comfortable and convenient bikeways.

– Martin Zimmerman, Charlotte

Trash draws raptors; signs would help

In response to “Signs to protect deer, so why not raptors?” (April 19 Forum):

The writer is executive director of the Carolina Raptor Center.

It is wonderful that someone Forum writer Strummer Edwards’ age is already concerned about conservation.

We treat 1,000 injured raptors each year, over 150 of which have been hit by cars. Most raptors are hunting by roads because litter has brought their prey there. Small mammals love the apple cores and other trash people throw from cars.

Raptors will hunt the same stretch of highway over and over again.

Strummer’s idea of “Raptor Crossing” signs is a great way to protect them.

– Jim Warren, Charlotte

The Charlotte Observer

WEDNESDAY APRIL 27 2016
CHARLOTTEOBSERVER.COM